

HEAD-ON COLLISION AT MEDICINE HAT

Seven Lives Lost. Many Persons Injured

Medicine Hat, July 9.—Locomotive forced back off its front truck and the 702, running light from here to the whole front of the boiler and boiler to pick up the Spokane flyer.

The express car on the Crow's Nest train had been partly telescoped by engine 576 and itself telescoped through the mail and baggage car. All three cars rolled into the ditch with the locomotive, which was reduced to scrap iron by the impact.

Harry Thompson, fireman on 702, ran up to the yard with the news. Engineer Nicholson was quite dead.

How down from the wreck, as was also Howard Gray, fireman of the Crow engine. Baggage-man Archambault, passengers Jas. Shaw, and Dun can MacEachern were instantly killed.

Engineer Thos. Tweddy since dead. Conductor Malette (dead) Brakeman Leonard Black and Express-man Vickers were seriously injured. Several other passengers are in the hospital.

Nicholson pulled out of the local yard shortly after eight o'clock, accompanied by Harry Thompson.

The other way to meet the eastbound Spokane flyer at Coleridge and make the run from that point to Moose Jaw. The morning Crow's Nest division train was at this time running into the city from Coleridge with the following crew: Conductor Malette; Leonard Black, brakeman; Robert Tweddy, engineer; Howard Gray, fireman; W. J. Archambault, baggage-man; C. C. Vickers, express messenger; Mosser, Dutton and Peel mail clerks.

The collision took place on the elevated piece of track just in front of the Dr. Britt, brick yard property.

Minister after named Hixman was just about to cross the track from the west side and way in such a position that he could see both trains, while each was blocked from the view of the other by the high cut bank around which the track makes an abrupt curve at this point. He waved frantically to engineer Tweddy and the latter apparently realized his danger, as he sprang back and reserved his engine just as he appeared at the cab.

Just as he appeared at the cab a cloud of steam and smoke settled over the wreck for some minutes. When it cleared away, engine 702 of the Spokane flyer, was seen.

These were all who were killed on right. Tweddy and Conductor Malette both died of their injuries. Brakeman Black's condition is considered serious, his jaw being broken. Fireman Thompson, after walking up to the city, had to go to the hospital with a badly scalded leg.

The passengers who are in the hospital are: Samuel Axtell, of Lethbridge, leg broken; Philip Menzies, rancher, of Talar, bruised.

Kearnsman Vickers was also in to have his wounds dressed, but is able to go to bed.

The mail clerks escaped serious injury in a manner which is nothing short of miraculous. As every one came out of the pile of wreckage a week or several more of the passengers received injuries of a less or less serious nature.

Engineer Nicholson had received his clearest papers from operators Ritchie at Medicine Hat. Ritchie has not been seen since the accident occurred. An inquest is being held.

Lines Raced Down Superior

Saint Ste. Marie, Ont., July 9.—The east of the race between the Hurons of the Northern Navigation company, and the Assiniboia of the C.P.R. fleet, was a victory for the Assiniboia, which arrived at the head of the locks at 5:35 this morning, about ten minutes earlier than the Huron.

The trip down Lake Superior was a most exciting one. The Huron was three minutes later than the C.P.R. boat in starting, leaving Port William at one o'clock yesterday afternoon, and caught up. Neither boat had any advantage until six o'clock, when the Assiniboia took the lead and held it right to the Soo. This morning at the government dock Commodore Anderson of the Assiniboia was presented by Mayor Thompson, on behalf of the citizens of the town, with a handsome chair. His worship also read an address, to which Captain Anderson responded suitably.

FOUNDED IN 1890.

Sydney, N.S., July 9.—The steamer Arctica, of the Thomson line, Captain Shaw, from Manchester to Miami, struck on St. Paul's Island last night in a thick fog and sank. The crew was rescued.

BRYAN NOMINATED LAST NIGHT

Pandemonium Still Raging Early This Morning

Denver, July 9.—Bryan's name was put in nomination by Dunn, of Omaha, at seven minutes past nine o'clock. Since then the tumult in the convention hall and there is no present sign of its abatement.

The report of the committee on resolutions has been promised for midnight, and by that time other nominating speeches will be heard if the raging Bryan demonstration continues. The convention has voted no ballot shall be taken on presidential nominations until after the platform has been adopted.

It will require at least two hours to read the platform, which embraces more than 15,000 words. The prospect, therefore, is that the convention will remain in session until the presidential candidate has been nominated, and balloting on this may not be completed until 4 o'clock a.m.

Democratization set the crowd wild. As he concluded with the magic name of Bryan a flock of doves were set loose from the gallery and they were floating about the auditorium. A great picture of Bryan was let down from above the platform. Jim Dabman seized a great American flag that had been placed in the desk of the president-elect, began waving it about thousands of feet from the platform as it descended the aisle of delegates, alternates and spectators.

Scenes even wilder than those of Wednesday's demonstration followed. His name was a steady roar. Megaphones kept it going. The horns increased the din. The interior of the arena was a solid mass of swaying color. Great flashes of exploding incandescent power and the stall roar following them added to the spectacle. One of the released doves took refuge on the frame of the picture of the candidate and the concrete walls of the hall fairly trembled beneath the shock of the volume of sound that set loose.

When the full committee on resolutions met at nine this morning, the platform, which it took the sub-committee to adopt, was practically completed for submission to that body.

The anti-injunction plank declares for the re-enactment of the federal law requiring notice before the issuance of preliminary injunctions. In cases of contempt issued outside the presence of the court defendants shall have the right of trial by jury. This is a plank much milder than "Compensatory" which the republicans for using treasury funds as an emergency measure to compel congress to pass the emergency currency bill, which has failed to give protection to fifteen million depositors of the country. The democratic party stands for an emergency currency to be issued and controlled by the federal government and loaned to national and state banks, under guarantee.

The democratic party advocates the abolition of monopolies and the enactment of additional laws to make monopolies impossible. The convention met at eleven o'clock. As soon as the permanent organization was perfected the platform was adopted and the next business was nominations for president.

"Yes, it is good," it is quite satisfactory," said President Sam Compers, head of the American Federation of labor today in discussing the action that the Democratic committee on resolutions took in relation to the demands made by the laboring interests.

"I am very well pleased with the platform as relates to ourselves, plank relating to the laboring interest, as a message for human liberty. It pulsates with brave thoughts. This pledge of treatment is not only in the interest of labor but protects and it will I believe secure many votes for the party. I regard the rights of all the people. While the laboring people are now the ones to be most immediately affected by such modification it is the laws of the whole liberties of the whole people are in fact better secured and guaranteed by it."

San Francisco, July 9.—The Atlantic battleship fleet sailed at two o'clock this afternoon. There were 15 battleships in the line led by Rear Admiral Scrymgeour's flagship Connecticut, the Nebraska being detached to-day and conditions allowed any rifle, any sign to the Angel Island quarantine, his ammunition and any first station because of an outbreak of scar class target. Five sighting and five sighting shots were allowed. The fleet at Honolulu.

There was no ceremony about the sailing of the fleet. Promptly at two o'clock, the signal went up on the Connecticut and anchors were hoisted, the Connecticut slowly got under way and led the column out through Golden Gate, but a course southward, for ten days where the ships will arrive on July 15th for a week's stay.

Dependable Drugs

Did it ever strike you how important it is that you should bring your prescription to a dependable drug store where you have consulted the best doctor you know? At a dependable drug store the best goods can be had without demanding them and you can depend that the goods are rightly kept, handled and dispensed.
The interests of the customer must be guarded at every point even to the price at which the goods are sold. We can justly claim that our store is a dependable and will stand the closest scrutiny in every detail.

A CABINET OF WEAKLINGS.

(Winning Telegram)
Even though rabid Liberal, the most violent partisan, must concede when he faces the situation squarely that the strength of the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is steadily waning.

The decline started shortly after the last general election, notwithstanding the immense majority by which the party was returned from the people, and each year has witnessed a gradual increase in the speed of the downward journey until in the past twelve months it has amounted to a veritable slump.

Nothing in the history of Canadian politics has been so amazing as the way in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues have lost the confidence of the country. They seem at the same time to have lost confidence in themselves. In parliament and out of it they appear vacillating, uncertain, a twist. Like a rudderless ship they are drifting helpless, the crew hopeless and terror-stricken. Those who can find safe billets disdained without consideration. Those who cannot remain grasping with palsied hands at what they can get.

The only hope the Liberals as a party have in facing the next general election, which must come before very long, is the reputation and personality of their leader. This is a slender thread to hang anything upon, and no one realizes more fully than Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself how desperate is the hope. He must feel as he reviews the brigade of which he is the general that he would be far stronger, far better for the fight if he led out before the people alone. Instead of an army behind him, he has a caravan of camp followers, a string of parasites leaning upon the strength he would reserve for the battle.

Let us follow him for a moment as he invests the cavalry. Pre-arranged amongst them is Fielding, the minister of finance, the only able man left of the stalwarts that were wont to press forward at the fray. One who has shown some ability in his department but who would seem large in a class of pigmies. Even at that, he outshines Sir Richard Car-tright, Hon. R. W. Scott and Hon.
William Patterson, a trio of has-beens never brilliant at their best, now in their declining years, a dead load to carry along. Instead of Menzies, Ontario loved and honored and trusted, he finds that dismal political appointment that was ever brought into a cabinet. For the strong, brainy, vigorous and independent Blair, he has a Pugsley, a well-to-do moneyseeker whose only claim to recognition was the necessity which forced him upon the government as representing New Brunswick at a time when a compromise had to be made.

The brilliant, reconciled organizer, the bold and talented Tarte is gone.
Sir Louis Davies, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Hon. William Mulock, Hon.
David Mills, are names only in history so far as the Liberal party is concerned. They are replaced by weaklings of the stamp of Jacques Bureau, Geo. P. Graham, Brooker, Lemieux and Templeman, a pretty assortment of back benchers to carry cabinet rank.

This is the fighting force for Wilfrid Laurier at his back. Is it any wonder that he dreads the coming of the fatal day when he shall have to appear to the electorate? Can anyone be surprised that he quails at the very thought of presenting this aggregation before the public? The fall of the outposts before the onslaught of the enemy. Ontario so completely lost that the Liberal party may be said to be wiped out of existence there as a party, New Brunswick overwhelmingly Conservative for the first time in years, British Columbia and Manitoba held with increased strength under strong, vigorous Conservative governments that have been again returned fresh from the people, and Quebec, his own province, weakened and disheartened. He sees the Opposition in Parliament and out of it, united under able, vigorous leadership, its strength daily and hourly increasing in proportion to his own failure, and everywhere the most alarming evidence that the great independent force to public opinion is turned completely away.

To reconstruct his cabinet before facing a general election is out of the question. There are two reasons why this course is impossible. First, he cannot throw overboard the disheartened, and must encumber the field. Second, and most menacing even if he did jettison the bunch, he has not got material at hand wherewith to make ministers to take their places. There is not an available man of first rate ability that he can get. Certainly he has not one in Parliament, and a glance over the field in the provinces in all that is needed to demonstrate their utility of the search in that direction.
Expediency may demand a change, or wo, but, in the main, it is the forlorn hope know leads that Sir Wilfrid must take into action.
